Woodward . Lothrop,

It Isn't Necessary

Every day to repeat the principles, practices and magnitude of this business. It must be seen and studied, and it must speak for itself. To us it is far from perfect. One by one we contend with and conquer difficulties. Daily we come nearer to the kind of storekeeping we have in view. But the further along the clearer the vision of still better things to do.

Our high values and low prices are evident to all purchasers, and never were values higher or prices lower than at present.
